The Software Connection Expands

Owners in self-storage get the assurance of reliable one-step computing with the Self-Storage Software Connection. Digitech International instigated a strategic alliance partnership with a group of Self-Storage Management Software Partners, including the most popular brand names in the industry. A reliable interface is guaranteed for each installation with two-way behind-the-scenes communication between the management software company and Digitech.

StorMan have applied and been accepted into the partnership. Welcomed as an international member, Storman Self Storage Software originated in New Zealand and has risen to become the premier software for New Zealand and Australia.

“Owners expect us to provide a seamless interface between our access control and alarm software and the management software they use for day-to-day financial data and operations,” says Jon Loftin, Vice President and Systems Engineer for Digitech. “We have worked hard to provide a cross-program communication that is effective and reliable, far superior to what some companies call a 'universal interface.' Each owner can rest assured that the programs talk to each other so that it's completely transparent to the managers and operators, reducing the workload and worry for site management personnel.”

“Digitech has always supported the requests to link up our program with others. Now, we're taking it farther with our strategic partners in the Self Storage Software Connection,” says Steve Cooper, Digitech's Director of Marketing. “We're putting a premium on the process by assuring owners that there will never be a finger-pointing problem between Digitech and its partners.”

“The alliances offer owners the value of a close working relationship with these select Self Storage Software Connection Partners,” says Cooper. “We want to make sure that owners understand the value and will know that they are really getting the best combination solution available for both accounting and security. In our opinion, with the Self Storage Software Connection we're just formalizing what we have already been doing for years and giving owners and operators the freedom of choice amongst the best software suppliers in the industry.”

These new members of the Self Storage Software Connection join RentPlus by Hi-Tech Software, Syrasoft Storage Management System, SiteLink from SMD Software, Inc. and StoreSM from Centershift®. Others include DOMICO 2005 from DOMICO, Storage Commander™ from Empower Software Technologies, and Nx.Gen by Space Control.
